

The cast of the Han Solo movie is shaping up to be pretty great so far, with Alden Ehrenreich, Emilia Clarke, and Donald Glover all already chosen for key roles. However, one of the most exciting new additions is obviously Woody Harrelson, and the actor has commented on his part for the first time. Asked for details by Mashable on who he's playing, The Hunger Games and True Detective star wouldn't reveal much, but did confirm earlier reports that he'll be serving as a mentor of sorts to Solo. "I'm a mentor to Han, but I'm also a bit of a criminal," he revealed. "I don't think I should say much more than that, because the Force is not allowing me." Who exactly he'll end up playing obviously remains to be seen, but as with Clarke's character, it's likely that it will be a new creation. The fact he's a criminal is something we didn't know, but not exactly a surprise given Han's no
