

Talking with the LA Times' Hero Complex, Jonathan Liebesman - director of the upcoming sequel Wrath Of The Titans, set to be released next month - discusses working on the film, a sequel to 2010's Clash Of The Titans. He said that he felt comfortable with working on such a big-budget epic film after directing Battle: Los Angeles, while also praising the mythology that the films were based on. Liebesman also comments on working with an all-star cast (Sam Worthington, Liam Neeson, Ralph Fiennes), what makes this movie different from Clash, and the monsters that'll be present. What drew you to directing Wrath of the Titans? I'm a huge fan of epic films that create a world you can escape to and experience the spectacle and awe of gods and monsters. Creating that world in "Wrath" has been incredibly satisfying. I had just completed "Battle Los Angeles," so I felt

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=55513&t=WRATH_OF_THE_TITANS_Director_Promises_A_Vast_Epic_Sequel