Of the film, Access Hollywood says, "It's been a banner week of online buzz for 20th Century Fox's "X-Men: First Class," the 1960's-set prequel to the blockbuster "X-Men" film franchise. On Tuesday, a low-res first look of the cast surfaced and spread like wildfire across fan sites. The montage image in question (which was later posted in a higher quality version on other sites including MSN.com), provided a peek at James McAvoy (Charles Xavier), Michael Fassbender (Magneto), January Jones (Emma Frost), Rose Byrne (Dr. Moira MacTaggert), and Jennifer Lawrence (Mystique) – amongst others — as they might appear in costume in the film. However, 20th Century Fox told Access Hollywood that the picture was not an approved image from the studio. In an interview with Slash Film, "First Class" director Michael Vaughn ("Kick-Ass," "Layer Cake") was quite vocal and made no bones about his ill feelings over the picture's online appearance. "I don't know where
