

Once upon a time, a young Kevin Feige, current president of Marvel Studios, and Geoff Johns, current chief creative officer at DC Entertainment got started in Hollywood at the production company run by Richard and Lauren Shuler Donner. Today, their two of the most influential people in the comic book adaptation business. Recently, Crave caught up with Donners where they asked a number of questions including how things were progressing with Days of Future Past and whether they'd team-up with their former employee Kevin Feige for an Avengers/X-Men collaboration. How is X-Men: Days of Future Past going? Lauren Shuler Donner: Not quite fast enough but it's coming along. We have a great treatment and we're just waiting for the screenplay. Do you still have Jennifer Lawrence now that she's become a megastar thanks to The Hunger Games? Lauren Shuler Donner: Yeah, definitely. Now that The Avengers has done so well, it seems like the

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=68265>