

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=28021&t=iYoung_Justicei_Could_Introduce_over_170_DC_Characters_by_First_Seasons_End

Young Justice producers Greg Weisman and Brandon Vietti recently talked with MTV about DC's newest animated television show. While they had quite a bit to say about what went in to bringing this show together, I found the thought process for choosing which characters to use on the show was really interesting. So when it comes time to build the roster for a team like this, what goes into the decision? Are you picking names out of a hat? How does the selection process begin? Weisman: First, I compiled a list of about 50 or 60 teen DC heroes. We started with as wide a selection as we could and then we tried to narrow it down based on a number of criteria. The criteria included a good mix of powers, skills etc. It had to do with it being a good diverse group, but we had our own personal geek preferences, too.