

The first group shot of Batman, Wonder Woman, Aquaman, Flash and Cyborg in Zack Snyder's Justice League should be enough to satisfy most fans of the DCEU as the countdown towards the November release of the film marches on. But the trully diehard, satisfaction won't be achieved until Superman (and Green Lantern) are assembled with the other heroes as well. New quotes from director Zack Snyder would seemingly indicate that such a scene will occur...or will it? In the latest print edition of Empire, Snyder states, "Superman does play a big part in this movie. His presence, and lack of presence, are big story points..." That's certainly a cryptic tease. Will the Justice League lack the firepower to ward off Steppenwolf and the forces of Apokolips without the Man of Steel? Or will we find a black suit Kal-el, brainwashed and in league with the "Fourth World" invaders? Let us know your theories and beliefs below. Justice League opens in theaters on November 17,

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice_league/zack-snyder-says-superman-plays-a-big-part-in-justice-league-a148414