

DC Films Universe photographer Clay Enos often posts photos to his Vero account long before Twitter and Instagram, and thanks to Batman-News, we now know that Zack Snyder is also a member of the mobile app. Over the past couple of months, he's shared a lot of Justice League set photos from there along with a doodle of the team; could that be his planned design for the movie's very first poster? Who knows, but these images are definitely interesting. It appears as if we can expect to return to Bruce Wayne's home in the movie, while whatever was shot in Iceland will clearly revolve heavily around Aquaman. Nothing from Justice League was released on November 17th as we had hoped, but Snyder will with any luck continue sharing more images like these over the next few months.

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice_league/zack-snyder-shares-a-new-batch-of-set-photos-from-justice-league-a147024