

Justice League director Zack Snyder has shared another intriguing image via his Vero account today, and as you can see, it puts the spotlight squarely on Ben Affleck's Caped Crusader. However, is the actor actually in the suit? I'm not so sure as this looks like it might be an action figure or maquette of some sort, and we may very well be getting our first look at merchandise for the team-up movie. Alternatively, it could be a model used for the redesign of the Dark Knight's iconic costume, something that 3D renders of the new cowl below seemingly points to being the case. We'll have to wait and see but with no trailer released over Christmas or the New Year, it's unclear when our next look at Justice League will come. Of course, Warner Bros. has ten months to promote the comic book adaptation. What do you guys think of this intriguing image? Let us know your thoughts in the usual place... 3D

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice\_league/zack-snyder-shares-an-intriguing-new-shot-of-batman-seemingly-from-a148304