

With the help of another passer-by, Saldana helped the bloodied woman out of her car and sat her on the sidewalk. Saldana then whipped out her mobile phone and called emergency services. And despite the ambulance being on its way, the actress made sure she remained with the woman until she received medical care. After being guaranteed the women would be OK, Saldana returned to her car. Hope this inspires people to become more compassionate about helping others. Well, what do you guys think?
