

With the Guardians of the Galaxy set to appear in Avengers: Infinity War, some fans have been wondering if the team will still be in safe hands with the Russo Brothers. We know that the filmmakers are more than capable (they introduced Spider-Man to the Marvel Cinematic Universe, after all), but the Guardians very much belong to director James Gunn, so surely he should be involved somehow? Well, in an interview with IGN, Zoe Saldana seemingly confirmed that Gunn will serve as a producer on the 2018 release. "James Gunn is a producer on [Avengers: Infinity War]. I know that he won't ever let the integrity of what he's created for the Guardians ever be compromised, so I'm at ease." Gunn being involved in some capacity makes a lot of sense, especially as he'll no doubt want to keep an eye on continuity for when he starts work on the inevitable Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 3! Needless to say, this is very

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/avengers/avengers_infinity_war/zoe-saldana-says-guardians-of-the-galaxy-vol-2-a148048